LLS Warehouse Management & Operations

LLS warehouse has improved its efficiency by optimization of following steps for efficient warehouse operations to meet the complicated criteria of quality, quantity, and timing for the entire customer satisfaction. Increasing the number of combination of versions in 1- delivery plan thus providing smooth material flow in order to allow an even more efficient use of the transport. The use of a compact sorting warehouse for the optimization of the storage material flow can play an important role.

Direct Access to Individual and Multiple Storage Goods

The systems are mechanically built like multiple storage and retrieval system that is completed by a cantilever racks on the right and left side. By placing the single work pieces directly on the cantilevers, the system allows a tight design of each single level corresponding to the shelf thicknesses. This warehouse system allows different level sizes for different thicknesses of panels, but the actual advantage of this system is the direct access to each section of the level and thus a speedy access to each single commodity and items.

Classification into Sections

The compact sorting warehouse is lengthwise split in sections of equal length. The length of each section depends on the average size piece length. The telescopic system of the manipulator unit is divided in identical sections that can be operated individually or combined.

Aims of a Sorting Warehouse System:

- Optimization of active processing time.
- Optimization of resetting time.
- Smoothing of storage capacity.
- Allowing several orders for the next shipping date as well as further orders of the same operation.
- Just-in-time feeding of storage directly from the sorting warehouse.
- Best possible utilization of the resources.
- Minimization of the cost and process.

Sorting Buffer Including Transport Routes for Feeding and Discharging of Goods:

- Stock administration of buffer stock.
- Control and monitoring of all transport routes.
- Control of operator units.
- Visualization of the complete system.
- Implementation of assortment logic.
- Current stock overview of sorting warehouse and sorting progress.
- Possibilities for a manual intervention, i.e. special retrievals of items.
- Optimization of transport in order to store or retrieve as many as possible items per cycle.

Planning Module:

- Import of all necessary data from the customer.
- Storage of the data in a data base.
- Central planning module for the movements.
- Display of all outstanding jobs.
- Grouping methods for the display and selection of the items differentiated by item numbers, purchase order numbers and batches.
- Batches in relation to the sorting capacity of the system.
- Display of the filling level of the sorting unit.
- Printing of staging lists for the adding and subtracting inventory in and inventory out module.
